

Time to Go Write
By Mark Osier

E A
If I could write like Brandon - tell me would that be so wrong?
E B7
If I did this verse would be about nineteen minutes long
The first verse would enrapture fans with adventure and with fun
E B7 E
But it would take about nine more until the song was done

I would sleep into the day and work all through the night

But I'm out of excuses - it's time to go write

I'll try to write like Dan and use some words that he might use
Pneumono-ultra-microscopic-silico-volcano-coniosis would do
I'd munch on bacon, sushi, pickles, and chile rellenos
While "I am the walrus" by the Beatles plays on my stereo
From my pen would flow the words that fill you all with fright
But I'm out of excuses - it's time to go write

I'm not sure I could write like Mary - I don't know puppetry
And plots like that would be hard if you just passed history
I could write on typewriters - well, maybe that would help
But the only Campbell that I have is soup upon my shelf
If I could write so glamorous you'd all fill with delight
But I'm out of excuses - it's time to go write

Maybe I could write like Howard - I already have the beard
I guess I could also shave my head though that might be too weird
I'd use both words and pictures when I structured every scene
And every verse would also have a hand-painted figurine
I'd want a talking blob of poo to go with me in a fight
But I'm out of excuses - it's time to go write

If only I could write like them how my verses would take flight
But I'm out of excuses - it's time to go write
